5 Ways to Avoid Writing Content That Will Never Be Read By Anyone

James Parsons, www.entrepreneur.com

Any time you're writing content, whether it's for your own site or for a guest post on another blog, you want to produce the best quality content you can. All the same, though, even excellent content can fade into obscurity if you're not writing something original. I could write you an excellent book quality guide to PPC marketing, but when there are a hundred other great guides and a thousand mediocre ones out there, how would mine gain any traction?

How do you guarantee that your content will be seen, will get the attention it deserves and not fall by the wayside? There are no guarantees in life, but you can certainly stack the deck in your favor.

1. Competitive Research

It's hard to find a topic that hasn't been covered at length, particularly in a crowded, content-rich field like marketing. You need to go narrow, and cover topics that haven't seen a lot of love. Whenever you have a topic idea, vet it to see what content already exists.

Is there a ton of high quality content already produced? If so, it might be a bad choice to write. Are there good articles out there, but they're light on content or out of date? These can be good opportunities.

Are there a few excellent guides available, but not a lot of competition? You can gain traction simply by approaching the topic from another angle.

If the existing content is deep, go broad. If the existing content is broad, go deep. Try to think outside the box, and approach your topic from a novel perspective.

2. Topic Ideation

Every topic idea needs to come from a search. The way people find content on the web today is to have an interest and perform a web search. If no one is performing a search, it doesn't matter how good your content is; no one will find it. Try looking for content ideas in places where people ask questions they want answered. What problems are people facing that they aren't able to answer on their own, and how can you bring a high quality answer to them?

25 TED Talks for Creative Entrepreneurs

www.itspinkpot.com

Running a business is not an easy job and it can wear you down at times if you let it. I do love my work and I am grateful that I can do what I love everyday, but as in every profession, there are days when I feel less inspired. On difficult days, it's easy to give up as you feel exhausted and burnt out but it's important to keep going. During such times, I find it useful to look outside for inspiration. A good, inspiring TED talk never fails to lift my soul and leave me feeling energized and motivated. For those times when you are in need of a little push and a little motivation, here are 25 TED talks to get you back on track:

4 Tips for Getting Your Business Mojo Back

Christina R. Green

When you're working long hours and the stress is compiling, your personal life doesn't go on hold. You still have familial responsibilities, bills to pay, friends to see, and thousands of other things that are on your mind. Let's face it. There are times at work that are just harder than others. Even the best job can feel...well, like work sometimes. It's hard to be inspired and do your best on the job when your business mojo has taken a back seat to all the other pressing issues in your life. But if you're going to be satisfied in your professional life, it's essential you get it back. Here's how:

1. Remember Why You Went into Business in the First Place

Most of us have a reason for going into the industry we're in. Even if you fell into it and it was not on your career most-wanted list, there's something that has kept you there. What is it? Is it helping people, seeing the smiles on their faces, crunching numbers, solving problems, or something else? Remember what it is that drew you to your industry (or the reason you didn't walk away three days in). Then find a way to get back to that.

It's possible you've lost your business mojo because you loved helping people and maybe now you're a manager and you don't deal with the customer directly unless there's a problem. You can either give up the management role and get back to what you love—helping people—or you can find ways to help people in your current role like becoming a mentor to junior members of the team.

QUITTING
WHY YOU
STARTED

your current position, even if it means taking on another role or reworking yours slightly.

2. Surround Yourself with People Who Understand

It's nice to lean on your friends and family for support when you're going through the career doldrums but unless they have been through similar situations, your complaining will eventually turn tiresome. You need to surround yourself with people who understand the pressure of business. Joining the chamber of commerce is a wonderful way to be around people who understand your level of stress and the growing pains of business. Unlike friends and family, they have likely been there and can help you get going and navigate when your sails have lost the wind.

3. Take a Break

Vacations are incredibly important to our peace of mind. Yet, the number of people not using time off is hitting epi-demically in this country. In 2016, 54% of Americans didn't use all their vacation. Some of those people even lost it because it wasn't used. Small business owners are particularly vulnerable because they always wonder who's running things when they're gone. If you're a mom and pop operation, you may not have taken a vacation in years.

Often by the time a business owner realizes they need one, they're so burned out that taking a week off doesn't even help. It may actually add to the stress because they're wondering what's going on with the business and they're concerned about what they'll come back to.

But vacations aren't the only way to take a break (although, if you can, you should). Most people go too long between vacations. They end up working many long hours before and after to take one. Some even take work with them. Instead, try to find ways to take breaks throughout your day. Go for a walk at lunch. Start your day off with meditation or reading a chapter in a favorite book.

When you're doing those things and taking a break, be there. Enjoy that moment. Don't look at your watch and think you only have five minutes. Enjoy those five and if they were 50.

4th Annual Jefferson County Sampler Planned for September 26

Chamber Staff

DANDRIDGE, TN – September 5, 2017 – The Jefferson County Chamber of Commerce is set to host the 4th Annual Jefferson County Sampler presented by Carson-Newman University Dining & Catering Services on Tuesday, September 26, 2017 at the Carriage House in Jefferson City.

The countywide food-tasting event is designed to showcase the specialties of local restaurants, bakeries and caterers.

The community is invited to join in sampling some of Jefferson County's finest hometown flavors. Tickets for the event are $15 at the door. Advanced tickets may be purchased for $12 per person through noon the day of the event. Tickets can be purchased at the Jefferson County Chamber of Commerce, US Bank in Jefferson City and White Pine Town Hall.

In addition to the local cuisine, the event will also feature live entertainment from hometown favorite, GRITS of Dumplin Valley. GRITS will feature a wide range of musical selections including Jazz, Blues, oldies and soft rock and will be joined by a very special guest guitarist, Carson-Newman University President, Dr. Randall O'Brien.

This year's Jefferson County Sampler is shaping up to be the biggest yet. The event will host more than 15 of Jefferson County's finest.

For more information or register as a vendor for the event, please contact the chamber office at 865-397-9642 or email at info@jeffersoncountytennessee.com.

Tennova Healthcare Presents “Getting Your House in Order” Seminars

www.tennova.com

KNOXVILLE, TN (August 18, 2017) – Tennova Healthcare invites the community to attend a free end-of-life planning seminar entitled “Getting Your House in Order.”

Since unexpected situations can happen at any age, it's important for all adults to be prepared. This seminar focuses on how to leave an organized estate and reduce the stress a person's loved ones will experience during an emotionally difficult time.

From practical matters to making one's final wishes known, the “Getting Your House in Order” seminar provides a step-by-step approach to collecting critical information and organizing it in one place. Attendees will receive a complimentary “House in Order” workbook that provides guidance on items to consider gathering, such as medical history, estate and financial information, funeral plans and advance directives.

Thursday, September 21

9:00 a.m. – 10:30 a.m.

Jefferson Memorial Hospital
110 Hospital Drive, Jefferson City

Seminars will be held at the following dates, times and locations. Space is limited and registration is required.

To register for one of the upcoming seminars, call 1-855-TENNOVA (836-6682) or visit Tennova.com. Please register at least one day prior to the seminar.

Tennova Healthcare offers a wide range of classes and programs to help you and your family lead healthier lives. Whether you need assistance managing a health condition, you are preparing for the birth of a child, or you are seeking support from others who are facing similar health challenges, Tennova Healthcare sponsors community events and support groups to meet your needs. Bryan Bolinsky of BB&T Bank said the Chamber of Commerce and the Jefferson County Youth Leadership program both display strong leadership qualities that line up directly with BB&T's corporate mission.

"The Jefferson County Youth Leadership Program is a very unique program that we consider a wonderful investment in our community and future here in Jefferson County," said Bolinsky. "The program prepares young people through education and practical hands-on experience in volunteerism, as well as affords them the opportunity to explore the many local non-profit organizations here in Jefferson County."

The Jefferson County High Youth Leadership program has received a $2,000 Education and Community Foundation Grant through BB&T Bank's Community Development group.

The grant is awarded to programs that support the advancement of literacy, education, community development and well-being throughout a given area. In addition, the grant is provided to areas that have a significant percentage of students that are on free-or-reduced lunch eligibility. Jefferson County met this criteria, with nearly 68% of students falling into that category.

Funding will be used to cover general expenses that support the mission and intent of the program, said Derrick Collins, Community Development & Membership Coordinator for the

Meet Your Chamber Staff

The Jefferson County Chamber of Commerce serves the interest of businesses in each of our five (5) municipalities within the county: Baneberry, Dandridge, Jefferson City, New Market and White Pine. Our mission is to build a positive business environment while enhancing our community's quality of life.

The Chamber offers a wide variety of valuable networking opportunities that connect our members with future clients and other business professionals. We also offer several educational opportunities that provide professional training and development offered by subject matter experts. From small business challenges to education from leadership development to infrastructure, from healthcare to natural resources, the Chamber knows that without a strong business environment we won't have the quality of life that we all want in a community where we live, work and play. Without a desirable quality of life our business community will not thrive.
